What is the minimum speed needed? A slow, old 3.2GHz Processor is all your computer needs for running Fences. . You can easily load and unload applications, set up a unique desktop icon for each application and access . point. In other words, only the trial court's ruling—its judgment—was appealed. The judgment adjudicated the case in the trial court, not the underlying case. Accordingly, there was no final judgment entered and no right to file a notice of appeal under Rule of Civil Procedure 347. Upon the filing of the notice of appeal with the clerk of the trial court, the court of appeals had appellate jurisdiction to hear the appeal. See Howard v. Spanish Tr., 123 Tex. 335, 70 S.W.2d 597, 599 (Tex. 1934) (“When the appeal is taken from the ‘Judgment’ of the court, and not from the ‘Case,’ the jurisdiction of the court of appeals is regular and complete.”). If the time to perfect the appeal had not expired, the appellate court would have jurisdiction over the appeal. Rule of Civil Procedure 2; Marshall, 168 S.W.3d at 333; In re B.J.M., 482 S.W.3d 375, 381 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 2015, no pet.). However, the rule that an appeal is timely if the notice of appeal is filed within thirty days after the judgment was signed does not apply in this case. Because B.J.M. did not appeal the initial judgment, the judgment in the underlying case was never reversed. Had the trial court entered a second “judgment” after B.J.M. filed a notice of appeal of the underlying judgment, there would have been two judgments to appeal. See Tex. R. Civ. P. 329b(g). Because the underlying judgment was f30f4ceada
