Story highlights Alaa Ehsaibi ran with his sisters through wheat fields in Hebron "I really want to know if we are going to die today," he said Suicide bombers struck buses in Jerusalem, Tel Aviv and elsewhere Families of five German teenagers who went missing recently have been told their children were killed in a terror bombing, the German government said Friday. Amer Khalil Fadil Abu Laith, the elder brother of Muhammed Abu Laith, one of the five boys, was in a Jerusalem restaurant with his wife, 2-year-old child and mother-in-law when the bombers struck. Abu Laith was taken to a hospital, but his wife and 2-year-old child were killed and he later died, according to a German government source. The source said the family has been informed of the news and the body has been returned to Germany. "We stand beside the families of all victims
