Ultimate Soldier Of Fortune 2.4Q: Word-based password without dictionary attack I have recently come across an article that shows how you can have a word based password that can not be cracked through dictionary attack. I have heard of BCrypt, but I have no idea if this is possible. Basically I have generated a PHP hash function that will get the password (160 characters). I don't want anyone to hack into the site and see the real password as it is in my source. Is this possible? A: Such password hashes are called one-way hashes, and they do not make cracking harder, they just save the site owner a little time to brute-force the same password for every user. BCrypt and bcrypt_password() are such hashes; they are quite reasonable. str "vsad" #:
