Canasta - de la familia rummy con juego verde Classic Canasta is a traditional family card game where the players have to be cautious not to allow their hands to be depleted. The game is played with a 52-card deck. There is a game board in which four game pieces (green, green, yellow, and red) are placed and the trick cards are dealt to each player from eight to four. The players use the cards to remove pieces from the board. Each player is allowed to remove three pieces from the board. When all of the cards in the deck have been used, a trick card is dealt to each player. The players can keep either three or four cards for that trick. When all of the trick cards have been played, the last card of the deck is dealt to the lowest scoring player of the deck. The players then play on a turn basis until one of them is "on the rail" and can not complete that round. When a player has no more cards available and cannot complete a round they are "on the rail". The player who is the last one to complete a round receives points and titles for each time that they hold on, minus points for each time they were "on the rail". If any of the cards in hand are the same suit as a card on the board you get two points, if they are of different suits then you get one point for each suit. If you manage to form a winning hand you get a point for each card in that hand, 10 points for a Royal Flush. Each player who owns a hand that contains two cards that are not the same suit as the hand wins a "break" which gives them an opportunity to remove a piece from the board. They also go to the first trick. For this game, the goal of the players is to eliminate all of the game pieces from the board and keep all of their cards. The game has been released as free demo version and you can play it on your PC or on your smartphone. And we would love to see your beautiful screenshots of the game. [Source]: Cards à la Carte Screenshot Cards à la Carte is a game of intrigue, all about tricking and bluffing your fellow suitors. Here you play the Princess. She wants to select a partner and decides to invite more than one suitor to court. The King and Countess have already selected their best friend, and the two remaining suitors will each be represented by a Handmaiden and a Prince. You, the suitor, have to try and amass all the cards for your character. Three cards represent your character and one of your two rivals. A fourth card represents the Princess, a fifth one is her handmaiden. You have to mix these four cards to get as close as possible to the Princess. Hiding your card The game is played in rounds of five minutes. Each player starts with 10 cards for their character. Three cards can be played at once: the character card and two of your rival's. Your second card can only be played after your first card is revealed. After three cards have been played, the remaining cards are revealed in order: the Princess, the handmaiden and the prince. One card is shown for every suit. If you play the king and countess's card, for example, the countess always gets her card in the first position and the king always in the last. You can only reveal your card when you are happy with it. You only have to 'bluff' the other players if you are unwilling to reveal your card. When you reveal your card, c9d1549cdd
