While Rhinoceros 3D is one of the easiest 3D modeling tools out there, Blender 3D is by far the most complex, at least until you learn it. Therefore, I recommend not trying to learn Blender on the first day, but getting to grips with Rhinoceros first. If possible, I would suggest using Rhino for modeling as it is done in Blender 3D, because it's easier to understand what the whole process looks like. I realize this doesn't matter much to some, but I find it useful to learn how Rhino works. If you are already good at creating models in Rhino, then it will be easier for you to move to Blender.
